Travis Ebarb, founder of Kingdom Kutz Media, a channel combining cinematic Bible animation with biblical archaeology and evidence research.

Full Bio

Travis Ebarb is the founder of Kingdom Kutz Media, a channel that brings Bible stories to life through cinematic animation and examines the real archaeological evidence behind Scripture.

His path here wasn't a straight line. In 2020, after COVID shut down his business, Travis got involved in Nevada politics, picking up a camera to document county commission meetings and helping push a gubernatorial campaign. Somewhere in that season, he landed on a different conclusion: the country's problem was never political. It was a separation from God, not because people reject Him, but because most simply never got the chance to know Him.

That season launched a new career. Travis has spent six years now working in editing, cinematography, and videography, four of them running his production company, Studio 17 LLC, doing video editing, filming, and graphics for product brands and for artists in the country music industry. In 2025, he brought that same skill set to Scripture and founded Kingdom Kutz Media. His own turning point came earlier, in a car accident he says he shouldn't have walked away from by any reasonable math. He calls it what it was: an improbability only God could pull off. Since then he researches and writes on Scripture and biblical archaeology daily, cross-checking multiple biblical texts and historical sources before anything gets published.

Travis lives in Las Vegas, Nevada, with his wife and daughter; his son is away at college. Nearly every day, people from around the world reach out asking for prayer or sharing what's really going on in their lives, then come back later with their own testimonies. That, he says, is the actual mission: not views, but bringing God's children home, and showing people that He is real and that His Son died for them.
